PV Project Implementation Conference – China 2012

Successful Large-scale Project Planning and Management, Operation & Maintenance, Quality Assurance
19 March 2012, Shanghai, China

Up to now China has been thought of only as the leading PV manufacturing base for solar cells and modules with 90% of its products being exported to Europe and the USA. However, the rapid fall in prices in 2011 has now made China's domestic market attractive. The total installed capacity of PV power generation targeted by the 12th Five Year Plan (2011-2015) has been raised to 10 to 15 GW.

Through this, China will become one of the largest PV markets in the world. The number of projects has already skyrocketed. Industry experts now predict as much as 5 GW in 2012 alone.

The conference, powered by pv magazine, aims at connecting Chinese and international project developers to share their experiences and further advance China's domestic market, as well as overseas markets.

Around 200 participants are expected, with the event being targeted primarily at project developers and investors. The event will provide the know-how to successfully install PV systems, covering all steps from planning through to monitoring the installed system.

Sponsorship

Thanks to its unique combination of topics and target groups, the event offers the ideal arena for establishing new business contacts and initiating co-operative ventures.

Make use of this opportunity to present your company and its products in the context of China's growing PV market, through an exhibition stand and/or by having your company's logo on all conference materials.
